

Cyber attack: Notice to Patients

15 May 2017

Last Friday 12 May, the NHS, along with many other organisations, experienced a 'cyber attack' which may be affecting our computer systems.

There are no reports of any patient information being compromised but the practice is taking the threat very seriously and we may need to suspend our IT systems as a precautionary measure over the coming days.

This may cause delays in activities, such as making appointments and printing prescriptions.

We are grateful for your patience and understanding as we try to ensure safe care for everyone.
